OVERLOOKED SILVERWARE.
George Worthington Offers Reward For Detection of Persons.
Bennington, Jan. 18.—The summer residence of George Worthington at Bennington Center, which has been closed since the departure of Mr. Worthington and family for New York the first of the month, was broken into by thieves last week and a few articles of provisions stolen.
Entrance was made by climbing on the roof of the porch on the east side of the house and breaking the glass in a window on the second story.
Nothing of value was taken. A quantity of silverware was in one of the closets, but this was undisturbed.
Mr. Worthington has placed the robbery in the hands of the local authorities and has offered a reward of $100 to the person who furnishes information causing the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties.

THE BAYONET.
Weapons First Used in France in the Seventeenth Century.
Mr. R. E. Sargeant, assistant curator Royal United Service Museum, writing in the latest issue of the Cavalry Journal on the history of the bayonet, deals in an interesting and informing manner with the subject, the article being illustrated with photographs of the various types of bayonets. The bayonet, he says, may be claimed to have been introduced by the cavalry branch into the British Army, for it was first issued to dragoons, though at that time they might perhaps be regarded as mounted infantry. The weapon was actually known in France during the latter part of the sixteenth century, but only in a sporting capacity, and in Cotgrave's Dictionary, first published in the year 1611, it is recorded: "Bayonette, a kind of small flat pocket knife to hang at the girdle like a dagger." As a military arm, the bayonet was not very much used before the year 1660. It was, however, in use in 1647, for in the "Memoires de Jacques de Chastenet, Chevalier, Seigneur de Puységur," published at Paris in 1747, it is stated in Chapter 8: "When I was in command at Bergues, at Ypres, Dixmude, and Laquesne all the parties that I sent out crossed the canals in this fashion. It is true that the soldiers did not carry swords, but they had bayonettes with handles one foot long, and the blade of the bayonette was as long as the handle, the end of which was adapted for putting in the barrel of the fusils to defend themselves when attacked after having fired."

This earliest type of plug bayonet possessed neither guard nor metalommel, the handle being of wood. Those with guards and pommeles of metal were introduced in the year 1680 and existed up to the year 1706. It must be remembered that the musket at its origin in the sixteenth century, was a most heavy and awkward weapon. Invented abroad, like almost every other military weapon (for none can be claimed by these islands), it was necessary to fire it over a rest (fourchette) since its weight prevented its being discharged without this assistance. The process of loading was very slow, and a quarter of an hour. Elsewhere it is stated on good authority that six arrows could be discharged while the musket was being loaded. For some time after the year 1647 the bayonet does not seem to have been very popular, perhaps owing to the size of the musket then used, and no doubt for this reason no mention is made of it in the "Marches de la Bataille" of Lottin, a work published late in the year 1647. As soon, however, as the fusil was introduced the excellence of the bayonet was at once recognized and the first French regiment to be armed with it was that of the Fusiliers, afterward the Royal Artillery, the function of the Fusiliers being to protect the guns.

Sir James Turner writing in the year 1670-71 mentions the use of the bayonet in the following words: "And indeed when musketeers have spent their powder and come to blows the butt end of their musket may do an enemy more hurt than these despicable swords which most musketeers wear at their sides. In such medley knives whose blades are one foot long, made both for cutting and thrusting (the half being made to fill the bore of the musket), will do more execution than either sword or butt of musket." Thirty years before the close of the seventeenth century the bayonet was beginning to assume a recognized position in the vocabulary of arms. In the year 1671 a corps was raised in France armed with fusils and bayonets, and in England in the following year on April 2 a warrant was issued by King Charles II, establishing a regiment of dragoons, to be raised in twelve troops of four score in each, besides officers, to be commanded by Prince Rupert. The soldiers of the several troops were ordered to carry one matchlock musket, with a collar of handbolters, and also one bayonet or great knife.

The bayonet was issued to the fusiliers regiments in England for the same reason that it was given to the corresponding troops in France. The first English regiment of fusiliers was the Seventh, raised in 1685. At first the chief duty of the fusiliers was the protection of the guns. The plug bayonet was no doubt a very great assistance to the fusilier, but it was an impediment in so far as while it was fixed in the muzzle the weapon could not be fired. Again it was of frequent occurrence that after a thrust the bayonet became so wedged into the barrel that it was impossible to extract it with ordinary force. The result of these two main disadvantages was the introduction of a new bayonet which when fixed still admitted of the fusil being fired. This new form was used in the Scottish war in 1689. Mr. Sargeant then proceeds to trace the bayonet's history down to the latest one-edged sword bayonet—London Globe.

ABOUT THE STATE
William Cuyler was in Burlington court Friday and pleaded guilty to attempting to enter the house on the E. W. Peck estate on College street. He was sentenced to serve not less than one and one-half nor more than two years in the State's prison at Windsor. Cuyler was bound over to county court at a hearing held earlier in the week.

The 17th annual reunion and banquet of the New England Alumni association of the University of Vermont will be held at Young's Hotel in Boston on Friday evening, January 29, at six o'clock. It is expected that President Buckham and Dr. H. C. Tinkham, dean of the medical department, will be among the speakers.

A concert and ball was given at White River Tavern at Hartford, Friday evening in honor of the commissioned officers of the Vermont National Guard, which has been in session there since Wednesday evening for the examination of commissioned officers-elect. There was a large number of guests present, 280 invitations having been issued, and music was furnished by an orchestra from Montpelier. The committee in charge of the affair was J. S. Newton, W. W. Russell, L. D. Gove, E. G. Briggs, N. H. Burnham, C. M. Cone, A. E. Watson, Dr. E. A. Barrows and A. Lamborn. Among the officers of the National Guard present were: Col. J. Gray Eater of Brattleboro, Maj. H. Edward Dyer and Capt. W. W. Russell of White River Junction, who are in charge of the school of instruction.

Munn-Avery.
Bradford, Jan. 16.—E. E. Munn and Miss Abby Avery were married last evening in their home by Rev. Dr. N. T. Stahl in the presence of a large gathering of friends. The bride and groom were well known in musical and social circles.

Miss Elizabeth Quilty Dead.
Rutland, Jan. 18.—Miss Elizabeth Quilty, for many years a resident of this city, died yesterday at the home of her sister, Mrs. G. L. Bassett, on State street, aged 83 years. Miss Quilty was born in Ireland, a daughter of John and Catherine Quilty. Her parents came to this country when she was very young. She is survived by two brothers, John and Michael, and two sisters, Mrs. John Lyons and Mrs. Bassett, all of Rutland. The funeral will be held at St. Peter's church Sunday afternoon at 3.

HONORABLE WAR RECORD.
Harry Rowe of Brattleboro Dead, Aged 72 Years.
Brattleboro, Jan. 18.—Harry Rowe, aged 72, plumber, musician and veteran of the Civil War, died of diabetes yesterday at his home on Canal street. He had been in failing health for two years, but had been confined to his bed only a week. For nearly 50 years Mr. Rowe had been a trombone player, serving in that capacity in the 4th Vermont regiment band in the war. Mr. Rowe was born in Bethel in 1836 and spent his early life there, learning the tinmith and plumbers trade. He came to Brattleboro 37 years ago and for 21 years was employed at the Estey organ plant as a pipe fitter. In recent years he ran a shop for himself. He played in the Bethel Band and Woodstock bands before the war. He served in the peninsular campaign and with the other members at Lee's Mills. His trombone was shot out of his hands when he was passing through White Oak camp and he never recovered from the shock. When Col. Samuel Hingree of the 1st regiment, afterwards governor of Vermont, was wounded at Lee's Mills, Mr. Rowe cared for him. He was one of the first members of the 1st regiment band of this town and went with the band to 17-state musters and made five trips to the White Mountain to play at fairs and coaching parties. He always went with the Vermont delegation to the national encampments of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Rowe was a prominent member of the Masonic fraternity. He married Emma E. Cox of Bethel in 1865. She died five years ago. On April 12, 1906, he married Pearl Agnes Porter of Aurora, Ill., who survives. Mr. Rowe was superintendent of the Universalist Sunday school 21 years.

The Masons will attend the funeral in the Universalist church Tuesday afternoon at 2.

JOHNNY'S VACATION.
Why He Wanted to Cut It Short and Return Home.
Johnny astonished the family in the country one day by announcing that he wanted to go home.
"What's that?" demanded his father.
"Want to go home?"
"Yes," maintained the boy.
"Well, that's very funny. It wasn't two days ago that you were begging us to stay up on this farm until October. Are you sick?"
"Nope."
"Got the blues?"
"Nope."
"Toothache?"
"Nope."
"Mad because your mother won't let you go swimming?"
"Nope."
"Ah! I think I understand," said his father, with a chuckle. "I happened to hear you saying that farmer's boy yesterday out back of the barn, and I also happened to see him flop you on your back. Did it hurt much?"
"Nope."
"Well, cheer up, my boy. We will have our ups and downs in this world. What good would it do you to go home?"
"If I was only home, pop," replied the boy, with a longing sigh. "I could knock the stuffing out of Sammy Green, and then I'd feel better."—A. B. Lewis in Bohemian Magazine.

At the Crossroads.
"Why do you object to Mrs. Brown for postmistress?"
"I object to her 'cause I know she'd delay the distribution of the mails."
"How so?"
"You know just as well as I do that she'd have to read every post card that came into the office—she's always 'makin' her speech'—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

BOSTON'S SPECIALTY OF BEANS.
Half a Million a Year. Eaten—Great Bakeries That Prepare Them.
Five hundred thousand bushel of beans are received and consumed here each year, says the Boston Herald. That is equal to 16,000,000 quarts. But these figures are for the raw, uncooked beans. The actual consumption is really double that, or 32,000,000 quarts of baked beans; for a quart of baked beans put into the oven in its pot will swell to such an extent during the process of baking that one quart will actually make two quarts in bulk.

Taking the sale of beans by the wholesale dealers, the prices paid for them by the people who bake beans in their own homes, the money put out by the bakeries and the big bean-baking establishments that supply hotels and restaurants, and the price laid down for a plate of them by those who indulge their appetites in this fugal fare in patronizing the purveyors of baked beans at eating-houses, and it is figured out that the yearly baked-bean bill of Boston is close to $10,000,000. That sums up a pretty large sum, but it is considered a modest estimate of the amount of money that the Hub spends on baked beans every year.

All the bakeries in the city turn out baked beans every day and in addition there are three or four establishments devoted exclusively to the business of baking beans, and on these very many hotels, restaurants and quick-lunch places depend for their supply. One or two of these establishments put out over 6000 quarts a week.

The dwellers in Little Italy in the North end and the Jewish population on the west end eat them like a native son of New England, and they are large customers of this staple food article of diet. In fact baked beans possess a charm for all nationalities who come to the home of them and get a taste of the genuine product. No matter from what country of the earth a man may hail, when he plants himself in Boston he soon becomes a loyal devotee of the beanpot. That is why the demand for baked beans is constantly on the increase here, and instead of $10,000,000, Boston will be spending $20,000,000 a year for beans.

Down in the heart of the North end is a bakery that turns out from 800 to 1000 quarts of beans a day, mostly for Italian consumption. At this bakery, and in fact at almost every large bakery in the city where beans are baked, the beans are placed in the oven about 7 o'clock in the morning and remain there until 5 o'clock in the evening, when they are taken out and the flesh of people for the bakery starts. They carry the beans to their homes in one or two quart pots.

The preparation and baking of the beans is an interesting operation. In those establishments where beans are baked it is done on a huge scale. There are great kettles that hold two or three hundred bushels, and into these they are put to soak and parboil. Then the pots, varying in size from one quart to two gallons, are ranged around on tables and filled from the big kettles for the ovens.

The ovens in which the beans are baked are huge brick affairs glowing red with heat. The capacity of some of them is enormous, being fully 200 quarts each. Filled with the loaded pots, they present a sight well worth beholding. There floats out, when the oven doors open, an odor so delicious that besides the famed odor of Arabia the Baked would seem like a cheap 10 cent perfume.

At the regular baked-bean establishments the beans are baked over night removed from the oven early in the morning, and then loaded into wagons for delivery to hotel, restaurants and lunchrooms in time for breakfast.

Saturday is the greatest day for baked beans in the city. The demand is the largest, then, the beans being wanted for both Saturday and Sunday, although Wednesday is also a big bean day, when quantities are called for.

The Real Thing.
"And did you have a good run in Arizona?" asked the privileged friend.
"Well, I guess yes," replied the barnstorming portrayer of Hamlet. "Fifteen minutes in one night with a mob behind you is going some, isn't it?"—Chicago News.

Partridge at $7 a Plate.
In the grill room of the Plaza Hotel, Lettard, head waiter, has devised a new dish which is scheduled at $7 a plate. It is "partridge Napoleon I" and is prepared by roasting four birds on a bed of sliced grapes, apples and pheasants, over which a quart of champagne has been poured. The fruit simply gives flavor to the birds and is not served.—New York Herald.

Etheromanes.
They resembled balls from a Christmas tree—tiny glass balls, bright red, yellow, green, blue, filled with a few drops of some clear liquid.
"They are ether balls," said the psychologist. "They are composed of gelatin, like the capenoids you swallow for indigestion, and inside them is just enough ether to make you happy without putting you to sleep. Etheromanes continue to increase, and etheromanes keep devising novel ways of taking the beautiful narcotic. The ether ball is a new and popular way. A group of etheromanes, lying together on silk divans, break under one another's nostrils these bright balls. The sweet, subtle fumes of the ether are inhaled, and the ether drunks dream their strange ether dreams. I cure many of them by means of hypnosis."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Sailors Educated at Sea.
The writing of letters and the reading of good books in the battleship libraries is a source of valuable information to seamen in the United States navy, officers at the recruiting station say.
"When I enlisted," a gunner's mate said, "I couldn't write very well, and my ideas of literature were uneducated. After a few months of painful scribbling to the 'folks at home' and to a certain young woman I began to be proud of my handwriting. To make my letters sound smooth I asked questions of the officers and read books on grammar and composition. Now, I believe, I am a first class correspondent. The libraries on board the battleships contain books by the standard authors. There are many hours every day that a sailor can devote to reading."—Kansas City Star.

The Emperor's Style of Dust.
There is a good story told of a German driving an English friend from Frankfurt to Homburg, when a motor car passed at a terrific pace, raising a cloud of dust.
"Ah!" said the German. "There goes our emperor."
"How do you know?" inquired the Englishman.
"Do you suppose anybody else could raise a dust like that?" was the reply.
